THE EVENING STAR has a requiar and times larger than that of any other paper in the city. As a focal NEWS paper and Advertising Medium it has no competitor.

WASHINGTON:

The Osborne and Montagu trials are suggestions to this republic of needed reforms in the criminal system. These cases remind the observer how frequently Great Britain secures the ends of justice through the regular channels of the courts, and all without delay or considerable cost. A woman of social position is convicted of perjury to conceal a mean theft, and although her condition appeals to social prejudices and the sentimental feelings of average men and women she is sentence and undergoes punishment just as any other criminal would. Another woman of assured ation in society punishes her little daughter so inhumanly as to cause the child's testh, and the woman's money, friends and influence are all unable to prevent her conviction for manslaughter English conquests of inferior races and nations may be irregular, cowardly and inhumane, but English justice as administered by English courts of law at home is generally sure, prompt and inflexible. It shows mercy to the thou sands and not to the privileged or powerful few. In this great republic, where political freedom is so broadbased and majestic, "the law's delay" (not to say the law's impotence) is a proverb having only a rare exception here and there in practice. Whether the fault is that of the legal profession, of the public or of the laws, the fact is depiorable. Among thoughtful Americans many remedies have been suggested and the subject has long received at least a part of the consideration due to it. Perhaps when the people are fully aroused to the importance of the reforms demanded their demands will take practical shape and the bench and bar will be equal to the duty of formulating the neces sary changes. The example of the mother sountry is before us.

Great evils call for radical remedies. A bil has just passed the House which seems to be on its face unduly severe. It is the Chinese exclusion bill. The act will exclude, because it includes in its provisions nearly every Chinaman who would try to enter the borders of the republic. The bill is not so bad as it seems because it is demanded by the people of this country not out of enmity to the Mongolian race, but simply as an effective measure of self-protection. Those who have some knowledge of the high binder societies and the abominable practices of the Chinese on the Pacific coast sympathize with the objects, and approve the details in the main, if not entirely, of the proposed exclusion act. A desperate disease requires a desperate remedy or remedies. If this bill is defective, let it be amended. If on trial it is only partially successful let another be enacted. The existing exclusion measure is about to terminate. No treaty of exclusion is at hand to take its place. If what is desired cannot be secured by the best and most appropriate method, to wit, a treaty, the object must be reached through legislation, and the republic must take its chances so far as Chinese retaliation is concerned.

When the sultan in his firman of investiture of the new khedive calls Egypt a "province" instead of a "principality," the title heretofore, he does not make a mere pashalic out of a more or less independent power. England's business on the Nile is to see to this, and England usually attends to her business along with that of everybody else who will let her. The sultan cannot help himself, but he goes through the empty form of degrading Egypt's rank as a country all the same. One advantage Egypt and the new khedive enjoy over the late Tewfik, his father, is in the fact that whereas Egypt paid on the latter's installation £11,000 only £6,000 are exacted for the expenses auguration. A splenetic diminution of titular rank where the real rank is not affected can be endured for the sake of the money saved on

In some of the southern states where the alliance and third party are making most ado the republicans are considering the propriety of not running a ticket at all. The idea of those who advocate this policy is to "let the democrats fight it out among themselves." A conference of such leaders in North Carolina has issued an address on this line which is creating a deal of comment, favorable and unfavorable. Some of the leaders object to waiting to see if the third party cat is going to jump, and if she jumps to see if she will jump far enough and in the right direction.

The projected Temple-Gunton Memorial Church, referred to elsewhere in THE STAR, will, when erected, serve as an object lesson and reminder to the wealthy and public spirited, who plan great things for charity or other public benefit, of the wisdom of putting their beneficent projects into practical operation during their lifetime, when they can see to it that their plans are not defeated, and when they can personally enjoy the luxury of intelligent giving and of observing the developed fruits of their beneficence.

The fourth annual session of the Scotch Irish Congress will convene at Atlanta on the 28th instant, and many noted orators of that people will grace the occasion with their oratory, usually of a high order. The Scotch Irish element has accomplished wonders for civilization and human liberty. Its impress is deep on American institutions, and it is also doing much for the far English communities in Australasian seas.

The present Congress has put itself on record with reference to the Chinese question, in the way that is regarded as most acceptable to the working man. Now, let it show a cordiality in connection with the G. A. R. encampment that will endear it to the old soldiers of the country.

The late republican taunts of democratic division on silver in the House are returned by the democrats, now that there is republican division developed in the Senate. The silver question is a thread running "catawampus" clear across the old-party cloth.

The Washington Club this year gives reasonable promise of making a change in the record that has grown monotonous even to those who are not especially interested in Nearly all Harlem is said to belong legally to a couple of young men in Wisconsin. At one time it was declared that Chicago was mostly owned by New York. The west is getting even. Ferdinand Ward points to his conviction as evidence that he had no money to conceal and use when he was liberated. It is a sad reflection on the American judicial system.

It is noteworthy that the loudest wail over the failure of free silver does not come from the working men to whose interests the idea

There is one great difficulty in the way of

"DEBUTANTE" STYLES IN TRIMMED HATS. Upon the first debut of any new style in Millinery we get it. We are "looking forward," not backward, and you will find in our stock every indication of newness, freshness, originality and refinement. We have all the graceful and "saucy" styles from Paris, London and New York combined with our original productions. Grain effects are the latest. Ceres, "goddess of grain," never dreamed that the domain over which she held sway was ever to contribute to the successful and beautiful decoration of her sex. But it is so. Never before in our Millinery Department have we offered such original styles. The galaxy of Hats, Toques and Bonnets which greet the eye here cannot be equaled by any other house in town. None have tried harder, none have better facilities and none have met with the brilliant success which has always attended our Millinery efforts. Our styles are exclusive and original. Inasmuch as Five Dollars appears to be the popular price for a Spring Hat, we shall lay out tomorrow about 50 Different style Hats, which were made to sell at $6. $6.50, $7 and $7.50, and offer them at the low uniform price of will again have a chance to see as fine a display of Parssols as are now here. A glance at our window will give you a suggestion of the Parasol perfection within. There is every conceivable kind, from the plainly practical Parasol at $1.50 to the Parasol poets in lace at one hundred times that amount. Silks, Satins, Ribbons and Laces are embodied in the luxurious makeup, while vivid hues prevail. In covercolors no shade which could be called brigh has been omitted. The sticks have a decided tendency to largeness, though some that look as heavy as a policeman's club are merely featherweight. There is artistic beauty and wide variety in the assortment which cannot be duplicated hereabouts. The opening goes gaily on. The millipery festivities continue the most brilliant, but more wearers of spring wraps go out than come in. In fact, there's a strong outward movement of goods all along the line, and we are conscious that happy buyers, and many of them, are making this a most hope to see you.

> THE DAY HAS DAWNED ____

The "sun is up" at last-and what a bright season it is roing to be. How the new fashions glimmer and shimmer-sparkle and glow-as they stand out in bold relief At lowest prices yet offered. Our Rubber Goods De from the dull monotony of the winter that is just sinking below the horizon of forgotten time. All woman hood has stood with open arms to receive them-while steady and sure as the incoming tide they have flooded the world with their beauty. How dainty and soft the new hues seem filtered through the delicate LACES. You must manage to have these NETWORKS draped on your gowns somewhere-somehow. Of themselves they are rich-but wedded to the more substantial "lights" of fashion the effect is elegance unalloyed. A choicer collection of patterns than ours is not to be found. We took the best of this and that lace maker's skill—and combined them in one immense as rtment-all "stare" of the first magnitude. Before you get your purses out-study them-with
